Nurturing Wildflowers

I empathize with the reader's letter [Habitat Destruction, July 2018]. I, too, have noticed that untimely mowing has caused many wildflowers to disappear, which means habitat loss for those feeding on them.

My neighborhood subdivision has lovely homes with beautifully maintained yards and cultivated plants. I maintain my front yard to conform. I have a corner lot that has a county road on one side. I reserve a strip of property along the right-of-way for wildflowers, and I delay mowing there.

You so are right that Route 66 [Rendezvous on Route 66, July 2018] is celebrated in so many ways. I have been a ham radio operator since 1960, and each September, the Citrus Belt Amateur Radio Club in San Bernardino, California, sponsors Route 66 on the Air. I get to talk to my friends on the radio who are on the air up and down the old highway from Los Angeles to Amarillo to Chicago. I even have a T-shirt with the

I enjoyed reading about Hunter Beaton's Eagle Scout project [Carrying Through, Currents, July 2018]. What a fine young man to take on this very worthwhile project that will be a gift to so many children in need for years to come. The article did not mention where Hunter will be attending college, but since my allegiance is to Baylor University, I was hoping that was his plan. He would be a great fit.

Give Us Credit

The By the Numbers item in Currents in July could be misleading. It's possible that because there are so many people in Texas who are not in debt, that is what causes the state to rank 46th among all states in average credit score. The longer a person goes without paying anything on time, the lower his or her score goes. So, it is possible that our low average just might mean that we have more people who are not in debt.

With that, just 11 days short of finishing his record 27th and final major-league season, Ryan, a Texas Ranger, left the game and took with him dozens of pitching records, including 5,714 strikeouts and seven no-hitters.

Ryan, who grew up in Alvin, entered the Baseball Hall of Fame in 1999 and is an executive adviser for the Houston Astros, one of his former teams.

JOHN GRAHAM'S newspaper career began with a delivery route of 100 subscribers. Decades later, the third-generation newspaperman is owner and publisher of the Lovington Leader, a small paper in eastern New Mexico, and the Denver City Press, across the border in West Texas. For his work upgrading presses and keeping community-oriented papers going, Graham, president of the Lea County Electric Cooperative board of trustees, was inducted into the New Mexico Press Association Hall of Fame in 2017.

HIGH FIVE, JOHN!

ON SEPTEMBER 4, National Newspaper Carrier Day, consider the role of small-town presses in Texas. Graham believes people should actively participate in their communities and that newspapers reflect the communities they serve. He applies this philosophy to his management of the Leader and to his life.

... AND READ A BOOK

To commemorate National Read a Book Day, September 6, the writers and editors at Texas Co-op Power tell about the latest books they read:

Chris Burrows: The Night of the Gun by David Carr. Journalist Carr turns his reporting chops on himself to uncover his own dark past in this memoir published not long before his sudden death in The New York Times newsroom.

Travis Hill: CivilWarLand in Bad Decline by George Saunders. Infused with equal parts humor and horror, these seven stories present a dystopian world in which theme parks are oases for the rich while the rest of humanity battles for scarce resources in a toxic wasteland.

Charles Lohrmann: The World We Used To Live In: Remembering the Powers of the Medicine Men by Vine Deloria Jr. A renowned Native American legal and religious scholar reviews the history of traditional spirituality.

Jessica Ridge: Commonwealth by Ann Patchett. A layered, decadeslong meditation on the ways that love, loyalty and compassion converge as two families fracture and meld—chaotically, painfully and sometimes beautifully.

Tom Widlowski: Bluebird, Bluebird by Attica Locke. The Texas author's dark, heart-breaking murder mystery lays bare racial tensions in a fictional East Texas town.

I intended to try only the apple turnover.

Five minutes later, I stand at the counter, balancing a jar of apple butter, a jar of jelly, a strudel, a slice of pie and the turnover. That's when another visitor mentions the apple ice cream. "Why hasn't Blue Bell caught on to that flavor?" he asks the cashier.

I turn back to find the ice cream.

Outside Love Creek Orchards' Apple Store in Medina, I spread my bounty on a bright red picnic table and sample the pastries. I savor the pie's flawless golden crust. The ice cream is light, not too sweet, and goes down way too easy.

Such are the pleasures you'll find in the Texas Hill Country, which is adorned with gems like this shop. Visually, the region offers a rolling landscape of limestone-and-granite hills, clear rivers, cedar and cypress trees, and regional haunts that delight weekend visitors and seasoned travelers.

More than 150 years ago, German immigrants were lured to Central Texas by tales of fertile soil and freedom from oppression. Instead, they found rocky fields that had to be cleared by hand and the threat of contentious and fast-moving Comanche. The early settlers persevered and built towns of precise and tidy stone structures, each a day's wagon ride—about 20 miles—from its neighbor. Today, we know some of those settlements as Fredericksburg, Kerrville, New Braunfels, Medina, Mason, Llano and Camp Verde.

Starting in the southwest corner of the Hill Country, FM 337 between Camp Wood and Medina is one of the most scenic drives in Texas. Along a curvaceous stretch popular with motorcyclists, signs warn of “Falling Rocks” going east and “Fallen Rocks” going west, a curious temporal twist. The rise of the Edwards Plateau reveals itself along this 60-mile route, displaying limestone cliffs and following the meandering Medina River.

Along the way, I read about community history. Vanderpool grew out of a Republic of Texas land grant in 1849. Originally called Bugscuffle, the town was abandoned following Comanche raids but re-established in the 1880s. Camp Verde was established to service the region’s military outposts.

East of Medina, freethinkers, including doctors, scholars, philosophers and aristocrats who fled the German Revolution of 1848, sought to establish intellectual, secular and democratic societies advocating scientific reason and religious freedom. They built the towns of Boerne, Comfort, Luckenbach and Sisterdale. Residents met to discuss politics, philosophy and literature; in such meetings, they spoke in the intellectual’s language of Latin, so the towns were dubbed the “Latin Colonies” of Texas.

Boerne was founded in 1849 and originally named Tusculum, after the home of Roman writer and orator Cicero. In 1852, it was renamed for Jewish-German journalist and satirist Karl Ludwig Börne. The town was known as a health resort in the late 1800s because of its proximity to Cibolo Creek and the Guadalupe River.

I drive north along FM 474 to find the Cave Without a Name. Mike Burrell, tour guide and cave manager, leads me down 80 feet of staircases through layers of geologic and human history. At the first landing, a pile of bones is evidence that eons of unlucky animals fell to their deaths through the small entrance above. Down another level, we find a ledge where a whiskey still dripped rebelliously during Prohibition.

In 1935, a group of youngsters shimmied down the sinkhole entrance with a kerosene lantern and crawled through a series of tight turns before finding cathedral-like rooms.

Burrell lights up the rooms as we walk through, one side formed by the subterranean streams of the Guadalupe River, the other by the slow drip of mineral-rich water onto the cave floor. Some of the largest calcite formations in the nation can be found here, and 3½ miles of the cave have been mapped, making it the seventh-longest in Texas.

We pass a small platform where the owners host concerts. Burrell replays a few previous performances on his phone and offers me a chance to sing. I manage a few lines of the Battle Hymn of the Republic and marvel at the resonance.

Back at ground level, I rush to Tootie's. Ruby

Lorraine "Tootie" Feagan moved her 20-year-old pie company from Medina to Boerne in 2005. The new building, situated in a business park, serves as a bustling outpost for Tootie Pie Co.

To reach the unlikely address, I zoom past a wrecker service and RV repair shop to find the modest storefront, where cubicle walls support a chalkboard listing a dozen offerings and seasonal specials. It's not a homey setting, but the pies are delicious. I sample the heavenly chocolate, lemon icebox and pecan, rolling my eyes in delight.

Another day's wagon ride up Interstate 10 takes me to Comfort, where there are more than 100 historic buildings constructed before 1910. Seven of them, including the old Ingenuhuett General Store, were designed by British architect Alfred Giles.

High's Cafe & Store drew in coffee lovers when it opened on Fort Martin Scott was the first U.S. Army post on the Texas frontier.

High Street in 2005 and has become a reliable staple for chef-inspired café fare. Proprietors Denise Rabalais and Brent Ault attract a dedicated following, including a steady stream of locals who catch up and share a bite on the covered patio.

Comfort was another of the Latin Colonies, proud of independent thought and human rights for all. In 1862, eight years after the town's founding, the Confederate Army called upon the locals to join their side in the Civil War. Thirty-six men and boys who refused were killed.

I walk a half-mile down the street from the café to see the Treue der Union, or “Loyal to the Union,” Monument. Etched into the surface of the 20-foot-tall limestone obelisk are the 36 names. The 1866 dedication ceremony was front-page news even in Harper's Weekly.

East of Comfort, RM 473 turns onto Old Number 9 Highway and twists past fields of livestock penned by hand-stacked rock walls. Old Tunnel State Park was originally a railroad tunnel built in 1917 to link Fredericksburg to the San Antonio and Aransas Pass Railroad. After falling into disuse in the 1940s, the area was turned into a state park; summering Mexican free-tailed bats took roost in the old tunnel.

I arrive around 7 p.m. and make my way to the viewing area just in time for the evening show. Three million bats stream out of the cave entrance in a counterclockwise wave of mammalian fluttering. “The bats circle around a few times to get elevation to get above the trees, and it looks like a tornado of bats,” says park superintendent Nyta Brown. “I never get tired of it.” Each bat eats its weight in insects each night.

Fredericksburg was first settled in 1846, the second colony founded under the direction of the Adelsverein, the Society for the Protection of German Immigrants in Texas. Unlike the freethinkers, the settlers of Fredericksburg were religious—evangelical Protestants, Lutherans, Methodists and Catholics. Each was given a parcel of farmland and a lot in town where many built “Sunday houses” near their house of worship.

Fort Martin Scott on the southeast edge of Fredericksburg was the first U.S. Army post on the Texas frontier, built in 1848. The town had negotiated a treaty with the Comanche by 1847, and soldiers at the fort were the first line of defense.

I wander among well-preserved remnants of the fort on a “living history” weekend. The tents of re-enactors and educators line the circle track, and classes of fourth- and seventh-grade Texas history students visit the encampments of Native Americans, soldiers and other period actors.

In one corner, Ray Hernandez, aka Chief Broken Eagle of the Tonkawa tribe, has set up a teepee and shows family heirlooms to wide-eyed children. Rita Rice, the living history coordinator, appears in the officer’s quarters in 1890s period dress. She walks students and adults through the two-room structure, pointing out features of frontier living. “I love seeing the kids in awe when I describe what people lived like back then,” she says.

On the lawn just outside the fort, Doug Baum is tending his camels, Richard and Jadid. Curious groups gather to take way. Just east of the dam and Inks Bridge, the park has become a civic art project of rock stacking.

Resident Belinda Morgan started the Llano Earth Art Fest to bring attention to Llano’s natural resources. The 2015 fest created the first World Rock Stacking Championship. The spring-time festival leaves stacks of rocks, called cairns, along the riverfront, inspiring others to contribute their own stack.

An ornate sandcastle grabs my attention as I pull into the parking lot. Then an 8-foot-tall dirt armadillo with a saddle on its back emerges from the bridge abutment. I pick my way down the granite boulders toward the water as rock cairns take over the landscape. Arches of rock defy gravity and rival the steel bridge over the river. On hot days, people create their stacks along the shoreline while standing in the cool water. This weekday, I see few visitors, and the park feels like an archaeological mystery created just for me.

Before I head back to the car, I try my hand at creating a stack, collecting medium-sized stones around my feet. Daily stress melts away, and my whole world joyously focuses on the fulcrum between rocks. Delightful.

pictures and ask why in the world there are camels in Texas.

Baum explains that in 1857, U.S. Secretary of War Jefferson Davis directed the importation of 34 camels from Egypt to establish a camel corps based in Camp Verde. The animals quickly proved their worth by carrying twice the usual load of survey teams and mail-carrying ventures.

The Civil War interrupted and ultimately doomed the camel experiment, but Baum keeps the curious story alive with this Texas Camel Corps. “I fell in love with the camels and had to get a few of my own.” He now leads camel tours through West Texas.

Turn north on State Highway 16 toward Llano, a frontier trading center that grew to prominence in the 1880s when iron deposits, granite quarries and brick-making sparked a boom period in anticipation of the town becoming the “Pittsburgh of the West.” Today, the city still is known for granite but also embraces its connection to Highland Lakes tourism.

Llano’s Leonard Grenwelge Park, along the south side of the Llano River, honors the city’s heritage in a new and charming Leonard Grenwelge Park in Llano features towers of rocks called cairns lining the shore of the Llano River.

North of Llano, I turn off Highway 16 at Cherokee and follow country roads to Colorado Bend State Park for a glimpse of Gorman Falls, a treasure of the Hill Country. The day is sunny but cool, and I head straight to the trailhead. Signs remind hikers to bring water and sunscreen, even though it’s only 1.4 miles to the falls. A few minutes on the trail helps me imagine an ill-prepared summertime hike.

The trail is easy but rocky, and it takes my full attention to keep my ankles true. After more than a mile, I come to a steep vertical descent down slick rock (thank goodness for handrails) to the hidden fairy pools of the travertine falls. Verdant green mosses drip water into clear cascading basins. The temperature here is 10–15 degrees cooler than the bright, open flats above, and I bask in wafts of misty breeze coming off the face of the cliff. A few feet from the falls, the titular bend in the Colorado River provides a place to cool yourself and your dog before heading back up the trail.

Now the incline of the trail feels more pronounced. I stop to catch my breath and admire the blooming cactus and try to listen for birdcalls coming from nearby trees. As I head for the parking lot, I pass hikers on their way down, watching their steps, raising their hands against the midday sun and reaching for their water bottles. I smile the secret smile of having seen the hidden splendor, knowing it was worth the struggle.

Frontier Texas

Where the West—and the Texas Forts Trail—begins

BY CHARLES LOHRMANN

This herd of eight 1,000-pound steel buffaloes turns in the wind above Abilene's Frontier Texas.

Frontier Texas recreates a historic fort. Architect Larry Good explained that when he and architect Bryce Weigand started on the project, they drew inspiration from the historic sites. "We visited Fort Richardson, Fort Belknap, Fort Phantom Hill, Fort Griffin, Fort Chadbourne and Fort McKavett.

"The sculptural chimneys that lead you up to the front door of Frontier Texas are based on the chimneys at Fort Phantom Hill," Good says. "The chimneys are the only things left there."

Fort Phantom Hill sits about 15 miles north of Frontier Texas, so it can be the first stop on your Forts Trail adventure.

Fort Griffin is about 50 miles northeast of Fort Phantom Hill, and that drive offers the combination of the partially restored fort and a recreation of the historic town of Fort Griffin. This notoriously rough village included the Beehive Saloon, where Pat Garrett once tended bar. One of the holographic "spirit guides" in Frontier Texas plays the part of Garrett and retells the story of the night he shot Billy the Kid. Between the restored fort and the town, you'll find a historic marker designating the site where Gen. Robert E. Lee met with Comanche leaders.

The historic sites, now mostly in ruins, can create a ghostly sense of the frontier experience. Some personal accounts say that contemporary visitors hear mysterious voices, the sounds of horses' hooves or the jingle of spurs. Usually, the sounds more closely resemble the whisper of wind in the trees.

Back at Frontier Texas, museum director Jeff Salmon says that most visitors are those traveling from east to west, and the Abilene area is where they first see iconic Texas sights. "We try to remain true to the story and still provide entertainment—make an emotional connection," he says. "We honor the past as best we can."

Charles Lohrmann is the Texas Co-op Power editor.

Among the most popular Hill Country destinations are towns defined by an ethnic history, such as the German heritage of Fredericksburg, Boerne and other picturesque destinations (see Page 8). Another option for exploring the Hill Country is to embark on a tour at the northern reach of the region, at Abilene's Frontier Texas, and follow a stretch of the Texas Forts Trail. You don't need to visit all nine historic sites to gain a sense of the intertwined narratives of 19th century settlers, Native Americans, buffalo hunters and adventurers.

On my own foray to Frontier Texas, the last thing I expected was a herd of flying buffalo. But that is what I found when I stopped at this starting point of the 650-mile heritage trail that wanders through 29 counties. These eight steel bison weigh about 1,000 pounds each (400 pounds fewer than the flesh-and-blood version), run in place at the top of their 35-foot posts and turn so that their noses are always into the wind. "It's the world's largest wind vane," says H.C. Zachry, the Abilene artist and advertising executive who designed the flying creatures, "265 feet from one end to the other."

He enthusiastically describes the engineering marvels nosing into the wind then explains that a tour of the museum inside features stories delivered by holographic characters developed to capture historic personalities and interconnected narratives. "We focused on the period between 1780 to 1880," Zachary says, "because after 1880, the railroad came through Abilene, and that changed the frontier completely."

Survival of the Sharpest

When it's you against nature, there's only one tool you need:
the tempered steel Stag Hunter from Stauer—now ONLY $49!

That first crack of thunder sounded like a bomb just fell on Ramshorn Peak. Black clouds rolled in and the wind shook the trees. I had ventured off the trail on my own, gambled with the weather and now I was trapped in the forest. Miles from camp. Surrounded by wilderness and watching eyes. I knew that if I was going to make it through the night I needed to find shelter and build a fire... fast. As the first raindrops fell, I reached for my Stag Hunter Knife.

Forget about smartphones and GPS, because when it comes to taking on Mother Nature, there's only one tool you really need. Our stunning Stag Hunter is the ultimate sidekick for surviving and thriving in the great outdoors. Priced at $149, the Stag Hunter can be yours today for an unbelievable $49! Call now and we'll include a bonus leather sheath!

A legend in steel. The talented knifemakers of Trophy Stag Cutlery have done it again by crafting a fixed-blade beauty that's sharp in every sense of the word. The Stag Hunter sports an impressive 5½" tempered German stainless steel blade with a genuine deer stag horn and stained Pakkawood™ handle, brass hand guard and polished pommel. You get the best in 21st-century construction with a classic look inspired by legendary American pioneers.

Your satisfaction is 100% guaranteed.

Feel the knife in your hands, wear it on your hip, inspect the craftsmanship. If you're not completely impressed, send it back within 30 days for a complete refund of the item price. But we believe that once you wrap your fingers around the Stag Hunter's handle, you'll be ready to carve your own niche into the wild frontier.

"This knife is beautiful!"

Concern for Community on Display at FEC Annual Meeting

JEAN MCKINLEY MOVED FROM HOUSTON TO CENTRAL TEXAS IN 1992 with aspirations of becoming a rancher. She and her husband, Harold, bought cattle, chickens and other livestock to fill their new property.

Today, they've whittled the herd down to about a dozen head of cattle on their ranch—a bucolic slice of Fayette County powered by Fayette Electric Cooperative, which has earned the McKinleys' loyalty: In all those years, Jean McKinley has missed just one Fayette EC annual meeting.

"I come to find out what's going on in the co-op," she said, adding that she's especially interested in learning about potential changes to her electric bill and whether she'll receive a capital credits payment. And like many other co-op members,

Jean comes for the door prizes, "which I have never won but one time," she quipped with a chuckle.

Unfortunately, this year's meeting, July 18 at the Knights of Columbus Community Center in La Grange, was not Jean's lucky night. It was lucky, however, for dozens of other members who won prizes ranging from gift bags, cookbooks and household appliances to electric bill credits, gift certificates and cash. Two members—Willie Barborak and Joe Powers—won $300 energy gift certificates in a prize drawing for those who recently updated their contact information.

While celebrating members with prize drawings is a meaningful component of Fayette EC's annual membership meeting, members also attend to stay tuned into the critical business of

1. Lezli Thomas, assistant cashier, registers a member.
2. Nearly 500 members and several guests attended the meeting.
3. Karin Hamilton of La Grange was the winner of a $50 Lowe's gift card.
4. Area Ministries for Emergency Needs received a $5,000 grant from FEC and CoBank.
5. Second Chance Emporium received a $5,000 grant from FEC and CoBank.
6. FEC members and guests enjoyed playing Plinko for prizes.
7. The lineman photo prop was a big hit with the children.

the cooperative, and that includes the election of directors.

This year, members of the cooperative voted to re-elect Gale Lincke, District 3, and Leo Henke, District 4, to serve additional three-year terms on the board. The FEC Board of Directors is made up of co-op members who make policy decisions at the co-op, and their election by members ensures Democratic Member Control, one of the Seven Cooperative Principles that guides all co-ops.

Gary Don Nietzsche, FEC general manager, provided attendees with a business review of 2017 in a video update, a key focus of which was weather's impact on the cooperative's system.

"Delivering electricity can easily become a challenging task when weather pressures are added to the mix," he said, highlighting rare snowfall and freezing temperatures of the most recent winter and 22 consecutive days of triple-digit temperatures in August of last year. But, Nietzsche said, "only one thing could eclipse the news that 2017 was trending toward the hottest year this area had experienced since the National Weather Service began keeping records in the 1890s: Hurricane Harvey."

Nietzsche credited emergency preparedness and teamwork for a swift recovery after the storm. "The employees rallied together, forming a cohesive team focused on one goal: restoring power to our member-owners affected by Hurricane Harvey as quickly and safely as possible," he said.

With summer in full swing, Nietzsche warned members of the potential impact of prolonged periods of higher temperatures on their pocketbooks—especially when combined with higher wholesale electricity prices and increased peak power usage. "Hotter temperatures will result in increased consumption to keep homes cool, creating higher electric bills," he said. "We always encourage our member-owners to conserve their usage of electricity no matter what the season."

Nietzsche went on to update members on the improvements the co-op has made to its system, including rebuilds, upgrades and installations of more than 72 miles of line and 24 miles of right-of-way maintenance.

Fayette EC is financially sound, Nietzsche reported. Operating revenues were $32.1 million at the end of 2017, up from $28.3 million in 2016, due in part to greater kilowatt-hour sales. System improvements grew the co-op's assets from $80.5 million to $83 million, Nietzsche said.

In February, the FEC board authorized $1.2 million in capital credits payments to co-op members who received service in 1988 and 1989. Capital credits represent each member's share in the cooperative's margins, and when any margins are left over after all expenses have been paid, the co-op's board can decide to return that money to members. Since 1958, Fayette EC has retired more than $11.8 million in capital credits.

"All of these events, projects and operational updates are not possible without great people," Nietzsche said. "We are blessed to have not only employees with decades of experience but also new, young employees learning and gaining the education and experience needed for future success. We couldn't have weathered Hurricane Harvey without their dedication and commitment to serving you, our member-owners."

Several of those employees were honored at the meeting for their years of service: Darrell Bertsch (40 years), Brandon Pieper (20 years), Director Henke (15 years), and Landry Bertsch and Doyle Hall (10 years each). Retired employee Leonard Zbranek also was recognized for his 48 years at the co-op.

Fayette EC is committed not only to providing reliable electric service to its members but also to improving the quality of life in their communities—in dedication to another cooperative principle, Concern for Community. One way FEC accomplishes that is by supporting local charities with the assistance of CoBank, a national cooperative bank. CoBank's Sharing Success program matches contributions made by its customers to charities they choose. At this year's annual meeting, FEC Board Presi-

1. Many members and guests tried their hand at the lineman challenge game.

2. Charles Allen Jr. of Ledbetter was the winner of a $25 gift card to various eateries.

3. Jean McKinley has missed just one annual meeting since she became a member in 1992.

4. Basil Ermis of West Point was the winner of a 55-inch TCL smart TV.

5. Youth Tour winners Madeline Benbenek and Abigail Roscher

6. A future member enjoyed putting for prizes.

dent David Lehmann and CoBank Vice President Mike Cowley presented $5,000 checks to representatives of Area Ministries for Emergency Needs and the Second Chance Emporium, organizations that provide food and other services to those in need.

Another way FEC demonstrates Concern for Community is by supporting local students through its Rural Scholarship program and the Government-in-Action Youth Tour. Each scholarship is worth $1,500, and the six recipients were introduced at the meeting. So, too, were the co-op's two Youth Tour participants: Madeline Benbenek and Abigail Roscher.

Youth Tour is an all-expenses-paid trip to Washington, D.C., where the students join hundreds of other teens from across the country to learn about rural electrification, meet their congressional representatives and explore our nation's capital.

"Not only was this trip one of the most fun experiences of my life, but it was also one of the most inspiring ones I've ever been on as well, and I can genuinely say it was the trip of a lifetime," Benbenek said.

Roscher echoed that sense of inspiration. "This trip has given me a feeling of increased national pride that will enable me to move forward into the future with hope that I, too, can do something to help our nation be the best that it can be," she said.

"These students are our future leaders," said Catherine Poppe, FEC's marketing and training coordinator, "and electric cooperatives will continue to ensure our youths are given every tool they need to succeed."

It's that level of commitment to community that helps define the cooperative difference and drives members—and future members—to be dedicated participants in their cooperative. And sometimes, that simply means showing up for the annual meeting.

As Nietzsche said, "We appreciate each and every one of you that came tonight. It shows that you care about your electric cooperative, and for that, we are grateful."

4-H members and volunteers served cookies, coffee, lemonade and bottled water.

Harry Cull of Hallettsville was the winner of a $50 Farmers Lumber gift card.

Gary Haggerty of Fayetteville was the winner of $100.

Election Results: FEC Members Re-Elect Two to Board

FAYETTE EC MEMBERS ELECTED TWO fellow members to the Fayette Electric Cooperative Board of Directors: Gale Lincke of La Grange, District 3, and Leo C. Henke of Hallettsville, District 4.

Lincke and Henke are board incumbents who ran unopposed. They were unanimously elected at the annual membership meeting.

Lincke represents members in Schulenburg, Dubina, High Hill, Freyburg and Swiss Alp. Henke represents members in Praha, Komensky, Breslau, Moulton, those north of Hallettsville and Moravia.

Special Prize Drawing Winners

The winners of the special prize drawing for updating their contact information were Willie Barborak of Moulton and Joe Powers of Weimar. Both members chose to receive $300 energy credits on their electric bills.

The 2018 Rural Scholarship winners were recognized at the annual meeting.

Jonathan Lopez was one of five winners of children's prizes.

Roxann Brossmann Redding was the winner of a $250 D&D Ace Hardware gift certificate.

Clogged, Backed—up Septic System...Can anything Restore It?

DEAR DARRYL: My home is about 10 years old, and so is my septic system. I have always taken pride in keeping my home and property in top shape. In fact, my neighbors and I are always kidding each other about who keeps their home and yard nicest. Lately, however, I have had a horrible smell in my yard, and also in one of my bathrooms, coming from the shower drain. My grass is muddy and all the drains in my home are very slow.

Dear
Darryl

My wife is on my back to make the bathroom stop smelling and as you can imagine, my neighbors are having a field day, kidding me about the mud pit and sewage stench in my yard. It's humiliating. I called a plumber buddy of mine, who recommended pumping (and maybe even replacing) my septic system. But at the potential cost of thousands of dollars, I hate to explore that option.

I tried the store bought, so called, Septic treatments out there, and they did Nothing to clear up my problem. Is there anything on the market I can pour or flush into my system that will restore it to normal, and keep it maintained?

Clogged and Smelly – Corpus Christi, TX

DEAR CLOGGED AND SMELLY: As a reader of my column, I am sure you are aware that I have a great deal of experience in this particular field. You will be glad to know that there IS a septic solution that will solve your back-up and effectively restore your entire system from interior piping throughout the septic system and even unclog the drain field as well. SeptiCleanse® Shock and Maintenance Programs deliver your system the fast active bacteria and enzymes needed to liquefy solid waste and free the clogs causing your back-up.

This fast-acting bacteria multiplies within minutes of application and is specifically designed to withstand many of today's anti-bacterial cleaners, soaps and detergents. It comes in dissolvable plastic packs, that you just flush down your toilets. It's so cool. Plus, they actually Guarantee that it restores ANY system, no matter how bad the problem is.

SeptiCleanse® Shock and Maintenance Programs are designed to work on any septic system regardless of design or age. From modern day systems to sand mounds, and systems installed generations ago, I have personally seen SeptiCleanse unclog and restore these systems in a matter of weeks. I highly recommend that you try it before spending any money on repairs. SeptiCleanse products are available online at www.septicleanse.com or you can order or learn more by calling toll free at 1-888-899-8345. If you use the promo code "TXS5", you can get a free shock treatment, added to your order, which normally costs $169. So, make sure you use that code when you call or buy online.

Marvels of Horsepower

Blanco's Buggy Barn Museum takes a turn into the 19th century

BY MARTHA DEERING

THE MUFFLED CADENCE OF TROTting horses drifts in the Hill Country breeze when I arrive at the Buggy Barn Museum to enjoy a version of Old West atmosphere. Proprietor Dennis Moore, in his battered hat and dusty boots, could have stepped straight out of a classic Western. In fact, on the day I visit the museum, Moore had just returned from working on a film set in Austin.

The 10-acre site on the northern edge of Blanco, on U.S. 281, features nary a nod to modern times. The museum's office, just inside the red gates, recalls the 19th century. It occupies a rustic cabin with a wooden porch and an inviting rocking chair. Longhorn cattle contentedly ruminate in the shade of trees near the highway, and a line of buggies and wagons is visible outside the museum's red door.

The 140-plus horse-drawn vehicles in the museum provide a hands-on history of travel from the early 1860s to about 1900. Each buggy, carriage, hearse and wagon embodies its own story, and Moore demonstrates knowledge of every nuance.

Moore's fixation began in childhood when his father bought a pony and cart for him and his brother. Serious collecting over the past 18 years has filled the large museum and expanded onto the surrounding grounds. From a massive Conestoga wagon to a light and classy Studebaker surrey with red fringe on top, the vehicles served the needs of a range of 19th-century travelers.

Moore is a fifth-generation Blanco resident who has encouraged his wife, children and extended family members to take an interest in the collection. His wife's lifelong love of horses made her easy to convince. "It wouldn't be nearly as much fun without the family involved," Moore says. "My grandchildren, ages 7 and 11, love to give tours."

The Buggy Barn Museum provides an educational opportunity to step back into the days of horse-drawn travel. Expansion of the collection and preservation of the history of horse-drawn transportation are the museum's primary goals. Moore uses the vehicles in parades and re-enactments, but along the way, word spread to film companies that horse-drawn vehicles could be rented from the Buggy Barn along with horses to pull them and drivers to handle the reins. In recent years, the movie business has kept Moore busy. Between 30 and 40 of his vehicles were used in the 2010 remake of True Grit.

Along with buggies and wagons, the museum houses a collection of vintage saddles, boots, guns and other memorabilia important for dressing a film set. Many of the museum's artifacts graced the screen in the recent Western series The Son. Moore also furnished horses and wagons for There Will Be Blood, filmed in Marfa with actor Daniel Day-Lewis.

Trailers with raised ceilings haul the horses, vehicles and equipment to a film's location. Moore has 20 horses, two donkeys and a black German shepherd named Kira who also is a movie star. With his grizzled beard and mustache, Moore looks right at home driving a team in a Western movie. In his most recent movie venture, Support the Girls (not a Western), he held the title of transportation coordinator, working all week in Austin and returning to Blanco on weekends.

With his encyclopedic knowledge of the Old West, Moore explains exactly how metal foot warmers burned coal to keep passengers from arriving at their destinations with frozen feet. He can point out the differences between a phaeton and a brougham and show visitors the tube that made it possible for those inside to talk to the driver. This is a man who lives and breathes the Old West—although he has been known to put a set of small wheels under a bright red sleigh and drive Santa in the Blanco Christmas Parade.

Martha Deering, a member of Heart of Texas EC, lives near McGregor. Her recent book, Elephant Dreams, is available at Amazon and Barnes and Noble.

All Hail the Cookie Jar

WHILE I'VE NEVER MET A COOKIE I didn't like, I like oatmeal cookies more than most. The best kinds are a comforting and welcome treat after school or midafternoon, when you need a boost. Whole grains and dried fruit even make them feel somewhat virtuous—no shame in eating one for breakfast, right? A few details give this recipe (slightly adapted from Food 52's website) extraordinary flavor and texture. First, the butter is browned before mixing, which gives the cookies a rich, nutty flavor. Second, the raisins are puréed before they're incorporated into the dough, creating a moist, chewy texture. Rolling the cookies in sugar before baking gives a delightfully crunchy coating.

PAULA DISBROWE, FOOD EDITOR

Brown Butter Oatmeal Raisin Cookies

- 2 cups dark raisins
- 2 cups flour, divided use
- 1 cup (2 sticks) unsalted butter
- 1 cup light brown sugar
- 1 cup dark brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 2 eggs
- 2 cups old-fashioned rolled oats
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1¼ teaspoons kosher salt
- ½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon espresso powder
- Sugar or turbinado sugar, for rolling (optional)

1. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Line two rimmed baking sheets with parchment.

2. Toss the raisins with ¼ cup flour. Place them in a food processor and pulse 20–30 seconds, until the raisins form a very thick paste and come together in a ball.

3. Heat the butter in a skillet over medium heat, watching it closely. When you see the bottom of the pan

HEATHER BRADFORD | PEDERNALES EC

The fragrant oil of bergamot, a variety of orange grown in Italy and France, gives Earl Grey tea its distinctive aroma. That same flavor (and a generous amount of lemon zest) perfumes these delicate sugar cookies.

To increase the citrus flavor, drizzle the cooled cookies with lemon glaze.

Earl Grey Lemon Cookies

DOUGH

- 4½ cups flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon kosher salt
- 2 individual bags Earl Grey tea (or 2 tablespoons loose leaf tea), ground
- 1 cup sugar
- Finely grated zest of 2 lemons
- 1¼ cups (2½ sticks) unsalted butter, softened
- 1 egg
- 1 tablespoon vanilla extract
- ½ cup buttermilk, divided use
- Powdered sugar, for rolling dough

LEMON GLAZE

- 2 cups powdered sugar, sifted
- ⅓ cup freshly squeezed lemon juice

1. DOUGH: Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Line two rimmed baking sheets with parchment.
2. In a medium bowl, whisk together the flour, baking powder, salt and loose tea leaves until combined.

3. Combine the sugar and lemon zest in a standing mixer bowl fitted with a paddle attachment. Mix the sugar and zest on low speed until the mixture is very aromatic and resembles wet sand. Add the butter and beat on medium-high speed for 3 minutes or until light and fluffy. Add the egg, vanilla and ¼ cup buttermilk, and mix on low speed until combined.

4. Add 2½ cups of the flour mixture to the bowl and mix slowly, until just combined. Stir in remaining buttermilk, then add the remaining flour mixture and process just until the dry ingredients are absorbed. The dough should be smooth and supple (if too sticky, add an additional ¼ cup flour).

5. Wrap the dough in plastic wrap and chill at least 30 minutes, or up to 2 days in advance (if you chill the dough for an extended time, remove it from the fridge 30 minutes before rolling out the cookies, to soften).

6. Dust a work surface with powdered sugar, then roll out the dough ¼ inch thick. Cut the cookies into rounds (or any shape desired) and use a thin spatula to transfer them to the prepared baking sheet.

7. Bake the cookies 10–12 minutes, until the edges start to turn golden. Transfer cookies to a wire rack to cool completely.

8. LEMON GLAZE: Whisk together ingredients until the mixture is smooth. Use a spoon, fork or pastry bag with a small tip to glaze the cookies. Store in an airtight container up to 1 week. ▶ Makes about 3 dozen cookies.

COOK'S TIP To grind the tea, place it in a sealable plastic bag and use a rolling pin to break down the leaves.

becoming browned, remove from heat and set aside.

4. Combine the sugars, vanilla and browned butter in the bowl of a standing mixer fitted with a paddle attachment and mix on medium speed about 5 minutes. Add the eggs one at a time and continue to mix on medium speed. When the mixture pulls together into an even texture, add the raisin paste and mix until thoroughly combined.

5. In a separate bowl, combine the remaining flour, oats, baking soda, salt, cinnamon and espresso powder. Mix the dry ingredients into the wet mixture in two additions, until there is no flour visible.

6. Using a soup spoon and your hands, roll the dough into rounds about the size of a Ping-Pong ball. Roll the balls of dough in a dish of sugar and place them on the prepared baking sheet, about 2 inches apart. Using the flat part of your palm, flatten each dough ball slightly to allow for even baking.

7. Bake 12–15 minutes, until cookies just begin to turn golden brown and are crinkly on top. Another good way of testing is to lift a corner of the cookie—if it bends slightly and re-forms when let go, they are ready. Allow to cool 5 minutes on the baking sheet before transferring cookies to a wire rack to cool completely. Store in an airtight container up to 10 days. ▶ Makes about 40 cookies.

Pecan Thin Crisps

GAYLYN HERRO | BRYAN TEXAS UTILITIES

These wonderful “make ahead and bake later” cookies have been a treasured family recipe since 1959, when Herro’s parents, Emma Jean and Keith Jaeger, were married. Traditionally, the cookies were prepared and frozen the week after Thanksgiving (pecan season) then baked in mid-December for Christmas gifts for family members, friends and the community. This recipe also can be cut in half to make fewer cookies if preferred.

- 2 cups (4 sticks) butter, softened
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

$100 Recipe Contest

February’s recipe contest theme is Cozy Casseroles, comforting, one-pan meals that are baked until bubbly and feed the entire family. The deadline is September 10.

ENTER ONLINE at TexasCoopPower.com/contests; MAIL to 1122 Colorado St., 24th Floor, Austin, TX 78701; FAX to (512) 763-3401. Include your name, address and phone number, plus your co-op and the name of the contest you are entering.

- 4 cups flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 3 cups finely chopped pecans

1. Place the butter in the bowl of a stand-ing mixer fitted with a paddle attachment and beat until smooth. Gradually add the sugars and beat on medium-high speed until the mixture is light and fluffy. Add the eggs and vanilla; mix well.

2. Sift together the flour, baking soda and salt, then gradually add the dry ingredi-ents to the butter mixture, beating well after each addition. Add the pecans and stir until just combined. Do not overmix the dough.

3. Transfer the cookie dough to a work surface and divide into six equal por-tions then refrigerate them on a plate 5–10 minutes (chilling makes the dough easier to work with). Prepare six 6- to 8-inch rectangles of waxed paper or alu-minum foil, then place a chilled dough portion in the center of each wrapper sheet and shape it into a roll approximately 1¾ inches in diameter, wrapping tightly, then freeze until firm (usually overnight). The cookie rolls will main-tain freshness in the freezer for more than 6 months.

4. When you're ready to bake, preheat oven to 375 degrees. Slice the frozen dough with a sharp knife in approxi-mately ¼-inch sections then place on lightly greased baking sheet. Bake 10–12 minutes until lightly browned. Remove cookies to cooling rack. ▶ Makes about 18 dozen cookies.

COOK'S TIP For the best results, slice and bake these cookies when the dough is still frozen. A food processor makes quick work of chopping the pecans. Simply pulse them into a coarse mixture. If you plan on freezing the cookies for longer than a week, wrap them in plastic wrap or waxed paper and an additional layer of alu-minum foil.

Bake Better Cookies

LINE BAKING SHEETS with parchment paper or a Silpat baking liner for easier cleanup.

SOFTENED BUTTER should be at room temperature or slightly cool to the touch—but not melted. (That will yield an entirely different texture in the baked cookie.)

CREAMING BUTTER and sugar until “light and fluffy” typically takes 3–5 minutes; it’s ready when it no longer feels grainy between your fingertips. The process creates tiny air bubbles that give the dough structure and help the cookies rise in the oven.

USING A HEAVY HAND with flour will create tougher cookies. To measure it accurately, spoon it lightly into a dry measuring cup and then level the cup off with a knife. Resist scooping the cup into the flour or tapping the measuring cup with a knife, this will make the measure too dense and heavy.

NUTS AND DRIED FRUIT are interchange-able; feel free to swap in your favorite flavors. —PD

Houston, We Have a Road Trip

Bay Area Houston offers a glimpse at Mars and a historic battleground

BY MELISSA GASKILL

A CLUSTER OF COMMUNITIES ON THE southeast side of Houston has played a major role in space exploration, from missions to the moon almost 50 years ago to space shuttle flights and research aboard the International Space Station. Space Center Houston, the official visitor center of NASA's Johnson Space Center, chronicles the out-of-this-world feats in interactive exhibits, full-scale displays, spacecraft and more than 400 artifacts.

My favorites include one of the actual Boeing 747s that ferried space shuttles across Earth and a full-size replica of the shuttle Independence, along with the chance to touch Mars and the moon in one morning—a meteorite from the former and one of 840 pounds of rocks brought back from the latter. I also geek out on exhibits on the current weather on Mars (spoiler alert: It's cold!), how astronauts sleep on the space station, and the hole that a speck traveling at 15,200 mph would make in a spaceship.

Two theaters show films, including Human Destiny, a history of NASA missions with plenty of archival footage. Mission Mars uses interactive exhibits, films, and scale models of spacecraft and rockets to detail the planned journey to this far-away planet. Fridays and Saturdays, visitors with reservations can share lunch with an astronaut and have their pictures taken as souvenirs.

Ninety-minute tram tours include historic mission control facilities for Apollo and the shuttles and working buildings in Johnson Space Center. A five-hour Level 9 guided VIP tour includes even more working buildings, plus lunch in the space center cafeteria where multiple astronauts dine and next-day admission to Space Center Houston. While many cities boast science museums or even space centers, this one can't be beat for history and authenticity.

Folks in these parts take equal pride in their role in events further back in history, so I drive about 30 minutes to the San Jacinto Battleground State Historic Site. Here, in 1836, a ragtag band of Texians under Sam Houston defeated Gen. Antonio López de Santa Anna's Mexican army to win independence for the Republic of Texas. I take in the view from the 570-foot-tall San Jacinto Monument (taller than the Washington Monument, which is 555 feet tall) and browse historic exhibits and a wealth of artifacts in the museum at its base.

Across the 1,800-foot-long reflecting pond, the spot where Houston's men camped along Buffalo Bayou, rests Battleship Texas State Historic Site and its namesake vessel. Commissioned in 1914, it fought in both world wars, including the Atlantic and Pacific theaters in World War II. Visitors can wander the 573-foot-long ship, up onto the foremast, around decks and gun turrets that move, and through living quarters for a crew of 1,600, a maze of kitchens, doctor and dentist offices, and more.

As I leave the venerable old ship, modern-day craft pass on the waters of Buffalo Bayou, also known as the Houston Ship Channel, as do dolphins and birds, including roseate spoonbills and an osprey.

Experience flights of a different kind at Saloon Door Brewing, just off the NASA bypass, where a beer flight offers a nice wind-down from a full day's activities.

Friends who work at Johnson Space Center recommend waterside Boondoggle's Pizzeria & Pub. Diners sometimes spot astronauts at the next table, they tell me, and if not, there are plenty of them in photos on the walls. Boondoggle's offers more than 50 craft beers on tap, including the aptly named Rocket Fuel and Space Dust, plus gourmet pizzas from a wood-burning oven, sandwiches, burgers, salads and more.

Houston, our road trip has landed.
